Join our “Autism is Treatable” Campaign!

As you have read in the many media reports of the recent so-called “Autism Summit,” the Federal Government and several multi-million dollar autism groups hope to be “finding effective drugs for the symptoms of autism” in 7 to 10 years.

NONSENSE! We need to tell them, and the media, and the tens of thousands of families of autistic children who don’t know, that many effective treatments are available NOW. If your child has recovered from autism, or improved dramatically, and you would be willing to speak to the media about your child’s recovery, YOUR HELP IS NEEDED. The Autism Research Institute has begun compiling an extensive list of families throughout the United States who are willing to talk to the media about their child’s recovery. We hope to be able to give local reporters (as well as national reporters) the names and phone numbers of families who are willing to be interviewed for television, newspaper and magazine reports.

We must get the word out in order to help the thousands of autistic children who are now being treated with harmful drugs like Ritalin and Risperidal. If your child has recovered or improved markedly, and you are willing to help, please provide us with your name, address, phone number and email address by filling out the online form at our website, www.AutismResearchInstitute.com. Your identity will be protected. Only media people seeking families in your locality will be able to contact you.
